History (Scott Forseman)

Students begin the formal study of U.S. history. The four strands of history, geography, civics, and economics are fully integrated. Students begin their study with the development of Native American cultures and conclude with the antebellum period ending in 1860. The geography strand emphasizes the influence of geography on early U.S. history. The civics strand emphasizes concepts and rights developed during the formation of our government. The economics strand uses material from the historical strand to further government. The economics strand uses material from the historical strand to further understanding of economic concepts.
